The report of Generals Steedman and Fu larton, the commissioners appointed to invesdiese the workings of the Freedmen's Bureau in the Southern States, in regard to their obpervasions in Virginia and North Carolina, states that a large number of the freedmen who are now dependent upon the Government for support would be able to earn a living if semoved to localities where labor could be proenred, and not collected as now, in many cases in localities where the land is unproductive and the demand for labor limited; and that as long as relaf is extended to the able bodied as well as the he pless, the former will not change their location to procure employment. They found that in those districts in Virginia and North Carolina where the affairs of the Bureau had men of sound sense and judgement, there had been no conflict between the agents of the Bureau and the citizens; and that wherever the agents were not men of capacity and integrity, an entire new stock of a very unsatisfactory state of things existed .-They state that it is not certain whether the effect of the operations of the Bureau is to promote industry or idlene-s among the freedmen; that prudent and i dustrious freedmen rarely call upon the Bureau for assistance, and that it is the idle and worthless who look to it for support; that a mass of the negroes have an idea that the Bureau possesses some mysterious power to serve them, and that, in case they are unable to obtain a livelihood as they desire, they can fall back upon it for support. The

These ideas, it will be readily seen, lessen their efforts to procure employment and to support themselves and their families. They also regard the existence of the Bureau as evidence that the Government looks upon the white people of the South as their enimies, which is calculated to excite suspicion and bad feeling on their part.

They state that they discovered no hostility among the white people of Virginia to the education of the freedmen. In several localities, more especially at Lynchburg and Charlottesville, where they thoroughly examined into this subject, the people were taking much interest in the establishment of schools for their education, giving as a reason for their efforts in this direction that educated labor was preferable to uneducated labor, which sentiment they believe prevails throughout the State. In another part of the report, in regard to

Virginia, they say: At the close of the war, in the chaotic condition in which society was left, in the entire absence of all civil authority, the judicious and sensible officers of the Bureau, supported by the military, exercised a good influence, and did much to preserve order and assist in the organization of free labor. The restoration of civil law and the recognition of the civil rights of the freedmen, as evidenced by the changes made by the Legislature in the laws of Virginia-giving them the right to hold property, to sue and be sued, and to testily in the courts in all cases in which they may be interested, (a gratifying | valuable. proof of the growing feeling of kindness toward them on the part of the whites,) render the freedmen, in our opinion, perfectly secure, it left to the care of the law and the protection of fully and almost immediately.
